

Republican State Convention,

Wednesday, June 12, 1878.

ST. CLAIRSVILLE, OHIO, May 11.

The next Republican State Convention, by direction of the Central Committee, will be held in the city of Cincinnati, Wednesday, the 12th of June, 1878.

The convention will nominate candidates for

Secretary of State,

Judge of the Supreme Court,

Member of the Board of Public Works.

We recommend that efforts be made to secure a large attendance at the meetings to appoint delegates, so that the people of the State may be represented in the Convention, and that the delegates be appointed on or before Saturday, May 25.

The basis of representation in the convention will be one delegate for every 500 votes cast for Gen. R. B. Hayes for President in 1876, and one additional delegate for every fraction of 250 votes and upward in each county.

Belmont—4976 votes for Hayes. 10 Delegates.

By order of the committee,

J. S. ROUSSEAU,

Chairman Rep. State Executive Com.

C. C. DONALDSON, Secy.

Congressional Conventional.

The Republicans of the 16th Congressional District of Ohio will meet in Convention at the city of Belmont, on to nominate a candidate for Congress for said District.

Thursday, June 27, 1878,

The basis of representation as fixed by the committee will be one delegate for every 125 votes cast for President Hayes at the election in 1876, and one additional delegate for every fraction of 62 and over, to wit: Belmont 40 votes, Garretts 25, Harrison 21, Jefferson 38, Noble 18. Whole number delegates 127.

ALEXIS COPE, Belmont co.,

W. M. FARRAR, Garretts co.,

D. A. HOLLINGSWORTH, Harrison co.,

JOHN A. McDONALD, Jefferson co.,

W. H. COOLEY, Noble co.,

Committee.

A word to the Legislature—Protect the Forest and crack the railroad bell.

Let the investigations proceed, but make them pass all around.

Come home, Senator Wagener, come home! It's time for you to come home.

The Ohio Legislature is in a quandary. Why to adjourn or give one more bull fight.

TILDEN ought to avail himself of the opportunity; the confession mill is running smoothly.

CINCINNATI refused to endorse by a popular vote the $2,000,000 bond bill and Uncle Dick Bishop's White Elephant.

The Cincinnati Enquirer says that Mr. S. J. Tilden is going to remove to Washington and will run the White House from the outside.

As a shoulder hitter the Democratic Railroad Commissioner bully Bill Bell, is success, especially when his antagonist is down.

The vote in Cincinnati on Friday on the $2,000,000 loan for the completion of the Southern Railroad was a vote of a lack of confidence in R. M. Bishop & Co. Trustees.

SILVER DOLLARS of the new coinage are now exchanged for greenbacks at the United States sub-treasuries, so that the dollar of the dollar will soon be in general circulation.

REMINGTON & SONS, the great rifle manufacturers, permitted their ambition to shoot to high and are forced to make a compromise with their creditors.

The Tribune says "the trouble with the 'fraud' brand is the persistency with which it leaves its mark on the Democratic manipulator instead of the other fellow."

The following head lines to a press dispatch announcing an election riot at Westcott North Carolina on Monday, Wednesday: "One Negro killed and another wounded—The Democrats carry the day."

One hundred and twenty two days have passed of the session of the Democratic reform, reorganize, O'Connor Legislature. It is the economical body of the Democratic party to conclude its labors in forty days.

The Enquirer of Saturday hints broadly at Governor Bishop in this wise: "A tussle can not be made to Ohio, particularly Southern Ohio, to vote him two millions. R. M. B. ought to resign one place and give up the other."

JOHN M. BINKLEY, Attorney General under President Johnson, who has been acting strangely for a year or more, has mysteriously disappeared from his home in Milwaukee, and it is supposed that he has committed suicide.

It is said that the Republicans Congressional fight over the right to grow down to Dr. Upgraff, of Jefferson county, and lawyer Taylor, of Garretts county, with the chances in favor of the Doctor. We hear that Jefferson county is likely to be sold for him in the convention, and from all that we can learn, Belmont will come up to his support quite handsomely. We trust that this news is true, as Dr. Upgraff will make an active and intelligent member of Congress. Mr. Danford positively declines to be in the field as a competitor for the nomination.—Intelligencer.

THE NEW YORK TIMES publishes a page of crop reports telegraphed from sixty points in twenty-nine States and one Territory. They are of a highly encouraging nature. Of these reports the Times says:

"With the solitary exception of Colorado, every State heard from—and they extend from Maine to California—reports the most brilliant prospects for the yield of every product of the soil. There is a cautious avoidance of confident predictions about the yield of cotton, but from Kansas to Timothy, the peas are to turn in a nearly unanimous verdict that through-out the length and breadth of the land this will be a veritable year of plenty. The enormous increase of the acreage of land under wheat, and the strange magnificent yield of that grain from States like Iowa, Kansas, Nebraska, and Minnesota, furnish some of the most striking indications of the pace at which agriculture development is proceeding in the United States."

THE NEW-YORK HERALD has sent a correspondent through New England to look into the condition of the manufacturing interests. He reports that the cotton mills are making handsome profits, which cannot be said of the mills of Great Britain, and that our export cotton trade is larger than before the war. In the leather trade, one of Massachusetts' chief industries, the same encouraging condition is reported.

DIPLOMATIC negotiations in regard to the Eastern question continue, but no news of definite accomplishments are forthcoming. Russia continues firm in her refusal to submit the San Stefano treaty without reserve to the European Congress. General Tollen is taking the Rhodope insurrection seriously in hand. The London Convention of the Eastern question, which is in our waters without alarm, because of the strict obligations imposed upon our Government by the Washington treaty.

As a precautionary measure the British Government has determined upon the immediate fortification of the island of Heligoland, in the North Sea, the island, with its twin, Sankelund, is less than three miles from the mouth of the Elbe which was captured in 1807 from the Danes, and retained for a naval station in the North Sea. The island, with its twin, Sankelund, is less than three miles from the mouth of the Elbe which was captured in 1807 from the Danes, and retained for a naval station in the North Sea.

The island, with its twin, Sankelund, is less than three miles from the mouth of the Elbe which was captured in 1807 from the Danes, and retained for a naval station in the North Sea.

The island, with its twin, Sankelund, is less than three miles from the mouth of the Elbe which was captured in 1807 from the Danes, and retained for a naval station in the North Sea.

The island, with its twin, Sankelund, is less than three miles from the mouth of the Elbe which was captured in 1807 from the Danes, and retained for a naval station in the North Sea.

The island, with its twin, Sankelund, is less than three miles from the mouth of the Elbe which was captured in 1807 from the Danes, and retained for a naval station in the North Sea.

The island, with its twin, Sankelund, is less than three miles from the mouth of the Elbe which was captured in 1807 from the Danes, and retained for a naval station in the North Sea.

The island, with its twin, Sankelund, is less than three miles from the mouth of the Elbe which was captured in 1807 from the Danes, and retained for a naval station in the North Sea.

The island, with its twin, Sankelund, is less than three miles from the mouth of the Elbe which was captured in 1807 from the Danes, and retained for a naval station in the North Sea.

The island, with its twin, Sankelund, is less than three miles from the mouth of the Elbe which was captured in 1807 from the Danes, and retained for a naval station in the North Sea.

The island, with its twin, Sankelund, is less than three miles from the mouth of the Elbe which was captured in 1807 from the Danes, and retained for a naval station in the North Sea.

The island, with its twin, Sankelund, is less than three miles from the mouth of the Elbe which was captured in 1807 from the Danes, and retained for a naval station in the North Sea.

The island, with its twin, Sankelund, is less than three miles from the mouth of the Elbe which was captured in 1807 from the Danes, and retained for a naval station in the North Sea.

The island, with its twin, Sankelund, is less than three miles from the mouth of the Elbe which was captured in 1807 from the Danes, and retained for a naval station in the North Sea.

The island, with its twin, Sankelund, is less than three miles from the mouth of the Elbe which was captured in 1807 from the Danes, and retained for a naval station in the North Sea.

The island, with its twin, Sankelund, is less than three miles from the mouth of the Elbe which was captured in 1807 from the Danes, and retained for a naval station in the North Sea.

The island, with its twin, Sankelund, is less than three miles from the mouth of the Elbe which was captured in 1807 from the Danes, and retained for a naval station in the North Sea.

The island, with its twin, Sankelund, is less than three miles from the mouth of the Elbe which was captured in 1807 from the Danes, and retained for a naval station in the North Sea.

The island, with its twin, Sankelund, is less than three miles from the mouth of the Elbe which was captured in 1807 from the Danes, and retained for a naval station in the North Sea.

The island, with its twin, Sankelund, is less than three miles from the mouth of the Elbe which was captured in 1807 from the Danes, and retained for a naval station in the North Sea.

The island, with its twin, Sankelund, is less than three miles from the mouth of the Elbe which was captured in 1807 from the Danes, and retained for a naval station in the North Sea.

The island, with its twin, Sankelund, is less than three miles from the mouth of the Elbe which was captured in 1807 from the Danes, and retained for a naval station in the North Sea.

The island, with its twin, Sankelund, is less than three miles from the mouth of the Elbe which was captured in 1807 from the Danes, and retained for a naval station in the North Sea.

The island, with its twin, Sankelund, is less than three miles from the mouth of the Elbe which was captured in 1807 from the Danes, and retained for a naval station in the North Sea.

The island, with its twin, Sankelund, is less than three miles from the mouth of the Elbe which was captured in 1807 from the Danes, and retained for a naval station in the North Sea.

The island, with its twin, Sankelund, is less than three miles from the mouth of the Elbe which was captured in 1807 from the Danes, and retained for a naval station in the North Sea.

The island, with its twin, Sankelund, is less than three miles from the mouth of the Elbe which was captured in 1807 from the Danes, and retained for a naval station in the North Sea.

The island, with its twin, Sankelund, is less than three miles from the mouth of the Elbe which was captured in 1807 from the Danes, and retained for a naval station in the North Sea.

The island, with its twin, Sankelund, is less than three miles from the mouth of the Elbe which was captured in 1807 from the Danes, and retained for a naval station in the North Sea.

The island, with its twin, Sankelund, is less than three miles from the mouth of the Elbe which was captured in 1807 from the Danes, and retained for a naval station in the North Sea.

The island, with its twin, Sankelund, is less than three miles from the mouth of the Elbe which was captured in 1807 from the Danes, and retained for a naval station in the North Sea.

The island, with its twin, Sankelund, is less than three miles from the mouth of the Elbe which was captured in 1807 from the Danes, and retained for a naval station in the North Sea.

The island, with its twin, Sankelund, is less than three miles from the mouth of the Elbe which was captured in 1807 from the Danes, and retained for a naval station in the North Sea.

The island, with its twin, Sankelund, is less than three miles from the mouth of the Elbe which was captured in 1807 from the Danes, and retained for a naval station in the North Sea.

The island, with its twin, Sankelund, is less than three miles from the mouth of the Elbe which was captured in 1807 from the Danes, and retained for a naval station in the North Sea.

The island, with its twin, Sankelund, is less than three miles from the mouth of the Elbe which was captured in 1807 from the Danes, and retained for a naval station in the North Sea.

The island, with its twin, Sankelund, is less than three miles from the mouth of the Elbe which was captured in 1807 from the Danes, and retained for a naval station in the North Sea.

The island, with its twin, Sankelund, is less than three miles from the mouth of the Elbe which was captured in 1807 from the Danes, and retained for a naval station in the North Sea.

The island, with its twin, Sankelund, is less than three miles from the mouth of the Elbe which was captured in 1807 from the Danes, and retained for a naval station in the North Sea.

The island, with its twin, Sankelund, is less than three miles from the mouth of the Elbe which was captured in 1807 from the Danes, and retained for a naval station in the North Sea.

The island, with its twin, Sankelund, is less than three miles from the mouth of the Elbe which was captured in 1807 from the Danes, and retained for a naval station in the North Sea.

The island, with its twin, Sankelund, is less than three miles from the mouth of the Elbe which was captured in 1807 from the Danes, and retained for a naval station in the North Sea.

The island, with its twin, Sankelund, is less than three miles from the mouth of the Elbe which was captured in 1807 from the Danes, and retained for a naval station in the North Sea.

The island, with its twin, Sankelund, is less than three miles from the mouth of the Elbe which was captured in 1807 from the Danes, and retained for a naval station in the North Sea.

The island, with its twin, Sankelund, is less than three miles from the mouth of the Elbe which was captured in 1807 from the Danes, and retained for a naval station in the North Sea.

The island, with its twin, Sankelund, is less than three miles from the mouth of the Elbe which was captured in 1807 from the Danes, and retained for a naval station in the North Sea.

The island, with its twin, Sankelund, is less than three miles from the mouth of the Elbe which was captured in 1807 from the Danes, and retained for a naval station in the North Sea.

The island, with its twin, Sankelund, is less than three miles from the mouth of the Elbe which was captured in 1807 from the Danes, and retained for a naval station in the North Sea.

The island, with its twin, Sankelund, is less than three miles from the mouth of the Elbe which was captured in 1807 from the Danes, and retained for a naval station in the North Sea.

The island, with its twin, Sankelund, is less than three miles from the mouth of the Elbe which was captured in 1807 from the Danes, and retained for a naval station in the North Sea.

The island, with its twin, Sankelund, is less than three miles from the mouth of the Elbe which was captured in 1807 from the Danes, and retained for a naval station in the North Sea.

The island, with its twin, Sankelund, is less than three miles from the mouth of the Elbe which was captured in 1807 from the Danes, and retained for a naval station in the North Sea.

The island, with its twin, Sankelund, is less than three miles from the mouth of the Elbe which was captured in 1807 from the Danes, and retained for a naval station in the North Sea.

The island, with its twin, Sankelund, is less than three miles from the mouth of the Elbe which was captured in 1807 from the Danes, and retained for a naval station in the North Sea.

The island, with its twin, Sankelund, is less than three miles from the mouth of the Elbe which was captured in 1807 from the Danes, and retained for a naval station in the North Sea.

The island, with its twin, Sankelund, is less than three miles from the mouth of the Elbe which was captured in 1807 from the Danes, and retained for a naval station in the North Sea.

The island, with its twin, Sankelund, is less than three miles from the mouth of the Elbe which was captured in 1807 from the Danes, and retained for a naval station in the North Sea.

The island, with its twin, Sankelund, is less than three miles from the mouth of the Elbe which was captured in 1807 from the Danes, and retained for a naval station in the North Sea.

The island, with its twin, Sankelund, is less than three miles from the mouth of the Elbe which was captured in 1807 from the Danes, and retained for a naval station in the North Sea.

The island, with its twin, Sankelund, is less than three miles from the mouth of the Elbe which was captured in 1807 from the Danes, and retained for a naval station in the North Sea.

The island, with its twin, Sankelund, is less than three miles from the mouth of the Elbe which was captured in 1807 from the Danes, and retained for a naval station in the North Sea.

The island, with its twin, Sankelund, is less than three miles from the mouth of the Elbe which was captured in 1807 from the Danes, and retained for a naval station in the North Sea.

The island, with its twin, Sankelund, is less than three miles from the mouth of the Elbe which was captured in 1807 from the Danes, and retained for a naval station in the North Sea.

The island, with its twin, Sankelund, is less than three miles from the mouth of the Elbe which was captured in 1807 from the Danes, and retained for a naval station in the North Sea.

The island, with its twin, Sankelund, is less than three miles from the mouth of the Elbe which was captured in 1807 from the Danes, and retained for a naval station in the North Sea.

The island, with its twin, Sankelund, is less than three miles from the mouth of the Elbe which was captured in 1807 from the Danes, and retained for a naval station in the North Sea.

The island, with its twin, Sankelund, is less than three miles from the mouth of the Elbe which was captured in 1807 from the Danes, and retained for a naval station in the North Sea.

The island, with its twin, Sankelund, is less than three miles from the mouth of the Elbe which was captured in 1807 from the Danes, and retained for a naval station in the North Sea.

The island, with its twin, Sankelund, is less than three miles from the mouth of the Elbe which was captured in 1807 from the Danes, and retained for a naval station in the North Sea.

The island, with its twin, Sankelund, is less than three miles from the mouth of the Elbe which was captured in 1807 from the Danes, and retained for a naval station in the North Sea.

The island, with its twin, Sankelund, is less than three miles from the mouth of the Elbe which was captured in 1807 from the Danes, and retained for a naval station in the North Sea.

The island, with its twin, Sankelund, is less than three miles from the mouth of the Elbe which was captured in 1807 from the Danes, and retained for a naval station in the North Sea.

The island, with its twin, Sankelund, is less than three miles from the mouth of the Elbe which was captured in 1807 from the Danes, and retained for a naval station in the North Sea.

The island, with its twin, Sankelund, is less than three miles from the mouth of the Elbe which was captured in 1807 from the Danes, and retained for a naval station in the North Sea.

The island, with its twin, Sankelund, is less than three miles from the mouth of the Elbe which was captured in 1807 from the Danes, and retained for a naval station in the North Sea.

The island, with its twin, Sankelund, is less than three miles from the mouth of the Elbe which was captured in 1807 from the Danes, and retained for a naval station in the North Sea.

The island, with its twin, Sankelund, is less than three miles from the mouth of the Elbe which was captured in 1807 from the Danes, and retained for a naval station in the North Sea.

The island, with its twin, Sankelund, is less than three miles from the mouth of the Elbe which was captured in 1807 from the Danes, and retained for a naval station in the North Sea.

The island, with its twin, Sankelund, is less than three miles from the mouth of the Elbe which was captured in 1807 from the Danes, and retained for a naval station in the North Sea.

The island, with its twin, Sankelund, is less than three miles from the mouth of the Elbe which was captured in 1807 from the Danes, and retained for a naval station in the North Sea.

The island, with its twin, Sankelund, is less than three miles from the mouth of the Elbe which was captured in 1807 from the Danes, and retained for a naval station in the North Sea.

The island, with its twin, Sankelund, is less than three miles from the mouth of the Elbe which was captured in 1807 from the Danes, and retained for a naval station in the North Sea.

The island, with its twin, Sankelund, is less than three miles from the mouth of the Elbe which was captured in 1807 from the Danes, and retained for a naval station in the North Sea.

The island, with its twin, Sankelund, is less than three miles from the mouth of the Elbe which was captured in 1807 from the Danes, and retained for a naval station in the North Sea.

The island, with its twin, Sankelund, is less than three miles from the mouth of the Elbe which was captured in 1807 from the Danes, and retained for a naval station in the North Sea.

The island, with its twin, Sankelund, is less than three miles from the mouth of the Elbe which was captured in 1807 from the Danes, and retained for a naval station in the North Sea.

The island, with its twin, Sankelund, is less than three miles from the mouth of the Elbe which was captured in 1807 from the Danes, and retained for a naval station in the North Sea.

The island, with its twin, Sankelund, is less than three miles from the mouth of the Elbe which was captured in 1807 from the Danes, and retained for a naval station in the North Sea.

The island, with its twin, Sankelund, is less than three miles from the mouth of the Elbe which was captured in 1807 from the Danes, and retained for a naval station in the North Sea.

The island, with its twin, Sankelund, is less than three miles from the mouth of the Elbe which was captured in 1807 from the Danes, and retained for a naval station in the North Sea.

The island, with its twin, Sankelund, is less than three miles from the mouth of the Elbe which was captured in 1807 from the Danes, and retained for a naval station in the North Sea.

The island, with its twin, Sankelund, is less than three miles from the mouth of the Elbe which was captured in 1807 from the Danes, and retained for a naval station in the North Sea.

The island, with its twin, Sankelund, is less than three miles from the mouth of the Elbe which was captured in 1807 from the Danes, and retained for a naval station in the North Sea.

The island, with its twin, Sankelund, is less than three miles from the mouth of the Elbe which was captured in 1807 from the Danes, and retained for a naval station in the North Sea.

JOHN M. GUNTER, nephew and resident legatee of the late Thos. H. Genin, died at his residence, 115 East 6th st.,

New York, on Tuesday last week;

the funeral services took place at the residence of his wife, Mrs. Genin, and his remains were interred in Green-Wood Cemetery. Among the divines who were present and took part in the funeral services, were Revs.

E. H. Chapin and Geo. Heyworth; the pill-bearers were Mr. Edward Leslie,

Mr. Edward Phelps, Mr. King, Mr.

Seelye, and Messrs. Amidon and Durbin, as representatives of the Hatters

Association. Beautiful floral tributes were sent by many friends. In the New York Times, of Saturday, we find the following sketch of his life:

Mr. Genin was born in James-Alpin, this city, 1819. He had but few opportunities for early education. When he was but 13 years old he entered the employment of Orlando Fish, who was at that time in Chatham square.

Two or three years later he became a clerk for Mr. Geo. B. Alvord, at No. 12

Bowery. When he was but 22 years old Mr. Genin entered into partnership with himself. He was active and energetic, and was shrewd enough to appreciate the value of advertising. Within 10 years he had built up a large business, by a shrewd stroke of policy, made himself famous throughout the country. He was then occupying a store on Park row stands. Mr. Barnum brought Jenny Lind to this city, and as the public desire to hear her sing was very great, he auctioned the seats for her performance. Mr. Genin was the first to bid $25 for the first choice of seats for himself, and, as the amount was the largest ever paid in this country up to that time, every country